ABOUT THIS GUIDE

This guide contains information based on the current Visa Product Brand Standards, and are subject to change. Please refer to the Visa Product Brand Standards for the updated guidelines through Visa Online web site.

THE CARD DESIGN TOOLKIT

A Visa card is so much more than a payment device. It is an aspirational item in the wallets of people all over the world.

It represents acceptance and reliability at tens of millions of merchants worldwide, and provides a safe and secure environment for payment, no matter where your cardholder is.

Therefore, it is important that the design of your Visa cards reflect those standards of quality, security and reliability that Visa is known for.

It should also reflect the individuality of the cardholder and display artwork reflecting that cardholder's aspirations and expectations in life.

This toolkit contains a range of ready-to-go card designs exclusively prepared for Visa card issuers.

DESIGNING YOUR VISA CARD

A Visa card's design is an invaluable opportunity to strengthen your own brand identity, and provide for your customer a product they can identify with. Both of these aspects are important, because they strengthen your ability to retain customers and improve your Visa portfolio's performance.

Who is your target market?

Your card's design should reflect the aspirations and needs of its potential customers. For example, cards targeted at the youth segment will differ considerably from cards designed for customers who are at a more mature financial life-stage.

Which Visa product are you designing for?

You should consider which Visa product you are designing your card for. Is it Visa Classic, Visa Gold, Visa Platinum, Visa Signature or Visa Infinite? Is it Prepaid, Credit or Debit?

Where will your Visa card be launched?

What your card's design says to your customer can vary widely depending on where it is launched. The card design should be consistent with the country or region's culture, norms and values.

What is your brand message?

You should view the designing of a Visa card as an invaluable opportunity for you to self-promote and strengthen your own brand.

It is also important for you to take into consideration Visa's card design specifications when designing your new Visa card.

To protect the Visa brand and deliver Visa's brand promise of universal acceptance, Visa requires issuers of Visa cards to abide by a set of standards governing the design, printing, production and personalization of Visa cards. Please refer to the Visa Product Brand Standards for the most up-to-date card design specifications and high resolution artwork of Visa Brand Marks and logos.

The Visa Product Brand Standards site can be accessed via Visa Online web site.

VISA CARDS APPROVAL PROCESS

To protect the Visa brand and issuer's investment, Visa requires issuers to submit card designs through the Visa Online application for each production run, including reprints, for approval prior to production.

APPROVAL PROCESS FOR VISA CARDS

Central Europe, Middle East and Africa

1 Color Proof Submission

Manufacturer submits the color proof on Visa Online application. The color proof submission is assigned a unique Visa reference number.

2 Final Card Design Approval

Visa review the submission within 3 to 5 business days.

3 Card Issuance To The Market

Following color proof approval, cards can be issued.

4 Non-Personalized Plastic Sample Submission

Manufacturer submits non-personalised samples (appropriately punched "void") to Visa within 10 business days of completing the newly produced batch order .

5 Non-Personalized Plastic Sample Feedback

Visa review the card samples within 3 business days. No further review letters will be issued unless the samples are to be declined.

AFFINITY & CO-BRAND

PROGRAM APPROVAL PROCESS

A Visa affinity program is a partnership between a card issuer and a non-profit, social or lifestyle association, while a Visa co-branded program is a partnership between a card issuer and a commercial partner.

Issuers planning to implement a Visa affinity or a Visa co-brand program must complete and submit an affinity/ co-brand program application for Visa's review. This application has to be submitted through Visa Online application for Visa's review process by documenting program details, such as opportunity forecasts, marketing plans, affinity/ co-brand partners, third party agents and other pertinent information. Please allow 5-10 business days from receipt for review.

Please note that card designs for affinity/ co-brand programs can only be approved upon approval of program application. Please ensure that this is taken into consideration as you plan your new program implementation timeline.

PRINT-ON-DEMAND APPROVAL PROCESS

POD (Print-on-Demand) cards have designs that are printed at the time of order fulfillment or for card personalization.

Card designs are added to generic Visa-branded card stock rather than incorporating the designs at the point of plastics manufacture. With this technique, issuers can offer cardholders the ability to design their own cards, or to select from a gallery of pre-designed cards.

POD - PRINT ON DEMAND

Choose your favorite picture, fulfill your creative desires with picture cards (cards for which cardholders provide pictures to the issuer for use as a cardface).

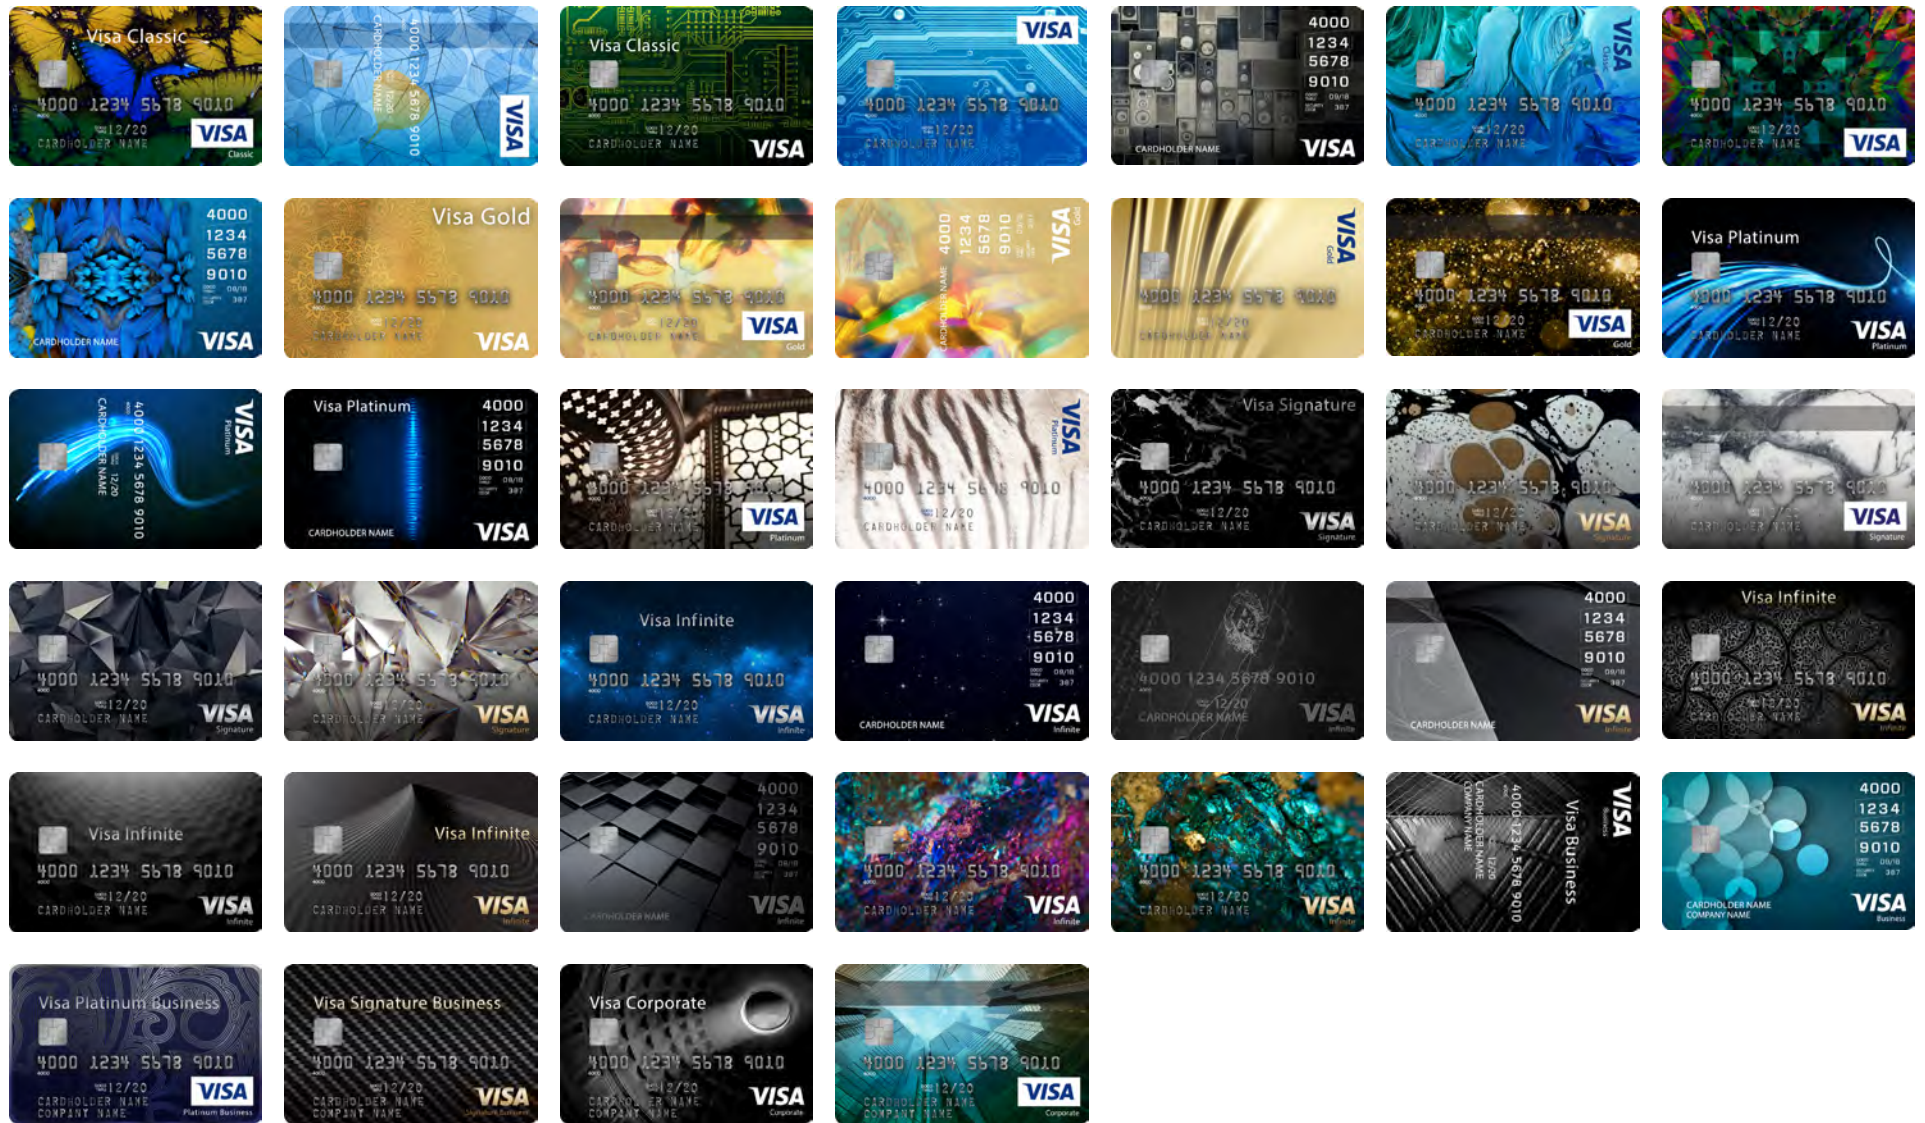

CARD DESIGNS

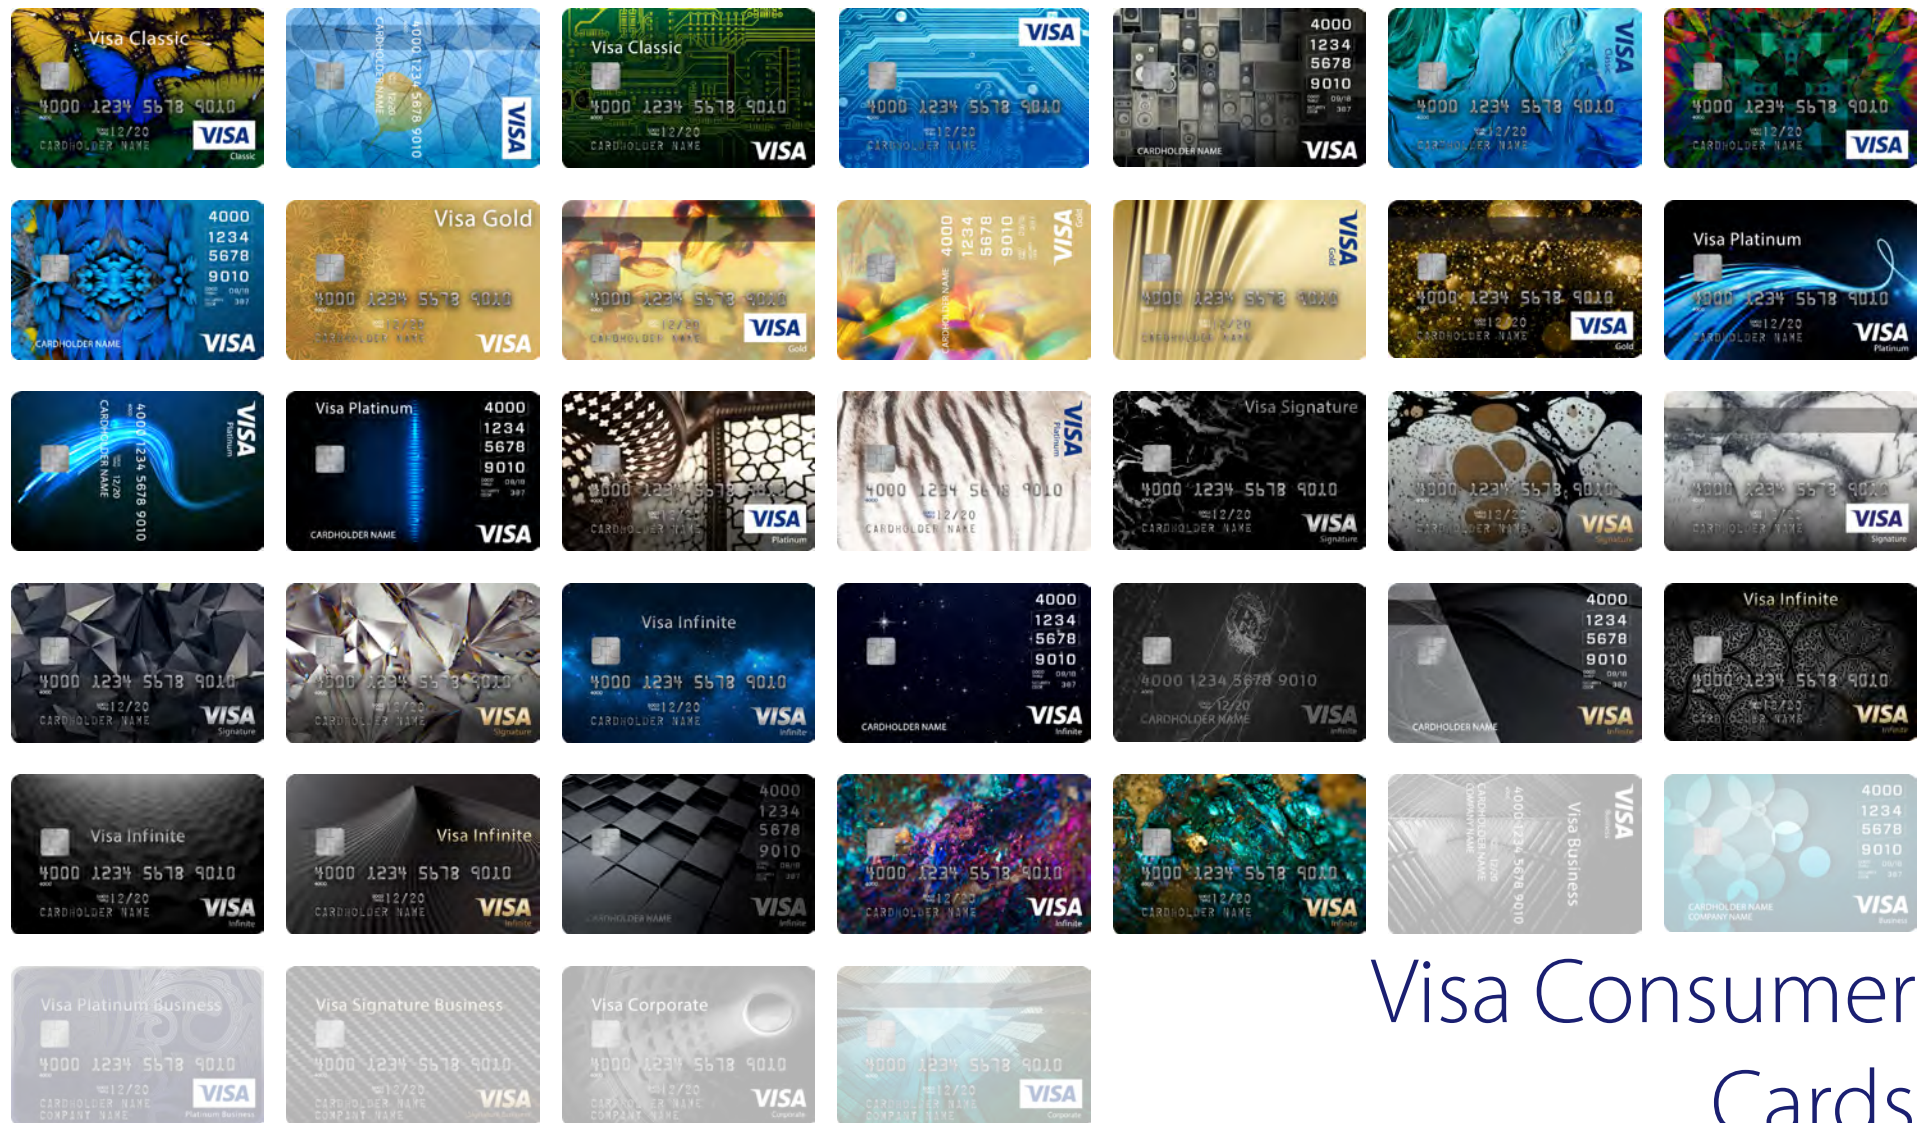

On the following pages, you will find a set of card designs which have been produced exclusively for Visa card issuers. We have also included suggestions on how you can enhance the designs using different materials and production techniques.

Additionally, the artwork can be downloaded through Visa Online. Click on the download icon (below the cards) and you will go directly to the log-on page of Visa Online, login and you will be routed directly to the download page.

Card issuers from Central Europe, Middle East and Africa may contact the CEMEA Card Designs & Standards team at cemeacarddesign@visa.com for more information on the card features, materials and production techniques.

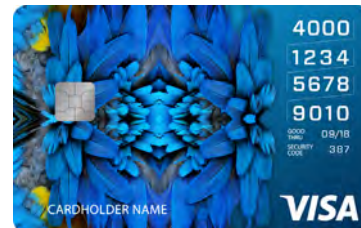

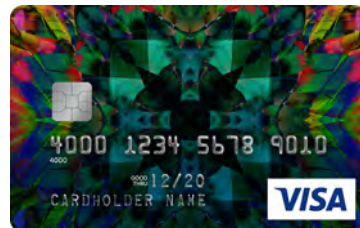

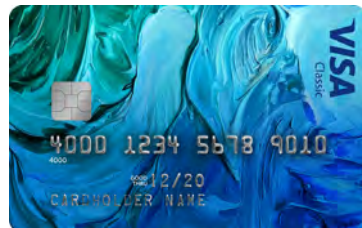

Visa Consumer Cards

Visa Classic Cards

Connection | Entry level | Part of a system | Young | Tech-savvy

Natural Lightness

A clean and organic imagery that symbolizes the simple yet delicate functionality of the entry-level card. This gives the end-user a sense of belonging to an ever-growing ecosystem of credit card users.

PVC card

Semitransparent card

Silicon Valley

End-users are technology-savvy and have a propensity for the latest gadgets and seamless transaction. The card will show the inside details of a single chip, looking to connect to a motherboard. This will create a feeling of connection as the user hands the card to a merchant to complete the transaction.
